For the Cure of Dysentery. Diarrhaa, and Summer Com-plaint.

In presenting this justly celebrated Medicine to the pub-lic, we make no rash assertions of its efficacy, nor is any hope held out to the afflicted which facts do not warrant. This remedy having been, for years, used in this for the cure of the above diseases and those appertaining to the same class, the Proprietor has been induced to offer it on a more extensive scale, with a view to lessen the amount of human suffering. I have never known it to fail when the di-rections have been strictly adhered to. Many useless nostrums have been palmed upon the public, and I hesitated for some time, until thoroughy convinced of its efficacy. Extract of a ettter received from S. J. Carroll. Extract of a ettter received from S. J. Carroll.

The Rot in Cotton-Its Cause.

The following communication from a most estima ble gentleman of Marion County, Ebenezer Ford, Esq. will be deeply interesting. Mr. F. has made a diligent personal examination into the cause of the rot in cotton, and his observations are, on that account, entitled to great respect. Many theories have been broached and speculations advanced the present Fall upon this subject; but few of them, however, have been based on anything more than mere opinion or perhaps a cursory look at a cotton field .-Such appears not to be the case with the following. Mr. Ford has obligingly favored us with drawings of five species of the "Bug"—varying in form and color. The drawings are colored, and appear to be exceedingly natural. We shall be glad to show them to any friends interested in the inquiry.

SPRING COTTAGE, Miss., Oct 12, 1852. MR. G. M. HILLYER: Sir-Having noticed trany supposed causes, assigned by your and other correspondents, of the rot in cotton, and finding, upon a strict examination as to the cause, that all are at fault, will for information to the planting community, give you a description of the bugs that pierce the cotton bolls and produce the fomenting rot.

It is a varied species of, and very smilar to, in all leading particulars, the bug commonly known as the China Bug. Hereunto appended, you have a rough and hastily-drawn sketch and painting of five species, differing only in form and color. All are alike armed (as an assassin does his dagger.) When turned down as a mosquito, then drive it down to the core of the boll, and draw it partially up and suck for a time; then drive it down again and suck; draw it from the boll and wipe it over, and move round the boll and pierce it again, or fly to another. They appear to be very wild; when approached, they shy over crablike to the opposite side of the holl or leaf-and are to be found at their work of destruction only late of an evening or early in the moining. Through the day, they are secreted in the bloom, under the covering of the boll or forms, in clusters of leaves. To establish the fact beyond a reasonable doubt, have marked bolls that were sound and healthy, that I saw those bugs pierce, and examined them from day to day until rotten. In fair, open weather, the little rusty brown spot is apparent in three to four days upon the boll pierced; and in about the same space of time thereafter, the bolls marked were rotten. In rainy or cloudy weather, the first perceptible evidence is a white, mouldy spot upon the boll. By observation, I have discovered that the infection imparted by those Bugs progresses much more slowly er. And I am of opinion from late observations, connected with my recollections of the rot in cotton from 1818 to 1824, that, when the weather favors the operations of those insects, the rot spreads as an epil demic. Having observed many other insects, than those described heretofore, sucking the fomenting holis and flying from boll to boll, by which I apprehend the contagion may spread as an epidemic, and as I have observed during rainy spells many diseased bolls, upon which I could find no evidence of their having been pierced by the Bugs first described, I conclude others may carry the infection. If any shall doubt that the Bugs described, cause the most disastrous rot in cotton, let such but make the examination as I have done, and they will doubt no more. antidote in the importation or change of seed. Fresh seed, or a change of seed, gives a more abundant yield, doubtless. But it may well be doubted, whether those insects will pay any fespect to seed, if they shall appear again next season.

On examination of different crops or yields, where I could find no rot, I could find no Bugs as those described-and where I found the rot I found the Bugs also. I have noticed further, that where cotton has been planted several years in succession the rot is more apparent. I have also marked some difference in the result as between old and new lands.

Having discovered the origin of the rot I tender information to the public, with the hope that Providence may remove the cause, or that some one may discover the remedy.

Very respectfully, your ob't serv't.

RICE-STRAW PAPER.—The following extract from letter from a gentleman of New England, of great intelligence, on the manufacture of paper from rice straw, deserves attention. Paper mills are now established in this state, but we have not heard that any one of them make use of the rice-straw in the manufacture. The paper made from the rice-straw is of excellent quality, and the material is so abundant with us, that the rice-growing states should have the monopoly of the business of paper making. The following is the extract:

"And from the various experiments made, we are forced to the clusion, that if a paper manufactory could be established in a rice country, where the value of the straw is considered nothing, and labor the same as here, thare would be a saving of $100 on each and every ton of stock consumed. There is used here about 20,000 tons of such stock every year, and the paper manufactured in New England last year exceeded one and a half millions of dollars.

"South Carolina and Georgia could produce thaterial for paper to supply the world, and there is no reason why it cannot be manufactured there as well and as cheaply as anywhere else. These states remind me of St. Pauls's expression, "though poot, yet making many rich; as having nothing, and yet possessing all things."

"I was fortunate enough to get the Geological Survey of South Carolina and Georgia, and Dr. Hays, from a careful examination, express the opinion that they are the richest states in the Union, and I have no doubt they will prove so when their resources are developed." - [Charleston Mercury.

It is too much the habit both with our people at home and abroad to depreciate the productiveness of our lands, and the system of agriculture pursued by our planters at the South. This is unjust and undeserved. Mr. Solon Robinson, the itinerant amateur farmer of New England, who visited in person nearly every farm of any note from Maine to Florida, informed us a few years since that the wheat plantations on James River excelled in culture and production any that he had seen in all his journeyings through the country, and that the immense corn fields on the Roanoke and Lake Scuppernong, in North Carolina, surpassed any thing he had imagined in the cultivation of that staple.

As an evidence of the fertility of our soil and the Barouches, Dushams, Buggles, Wagons, Gigs, Sulkeys, &c. Also, Harness of all kinds.

Purchasers will find it to their interest to call and examine before purchasing elsewhere, as I am determined not to be undersold.
